How to Prepare for Your Next Application You've applied to your dream school. You've been accepted and, most importantly, you have deadlines. It seems like an eternity since you began preparing for this period of your life, doesn't it? One of the most important aspects of the application process is to follow every step as instructed. The good news is that there are many opportunities to get support throughout the process. So whether you are at your dream university or you're still thinking about whether or not to apply, there's time to prepare. Before You Begin Take a look at our guided student guide to help you master everything you need to know about your next college application process. It can be a little confusing at times with the different websites but it's a great way to get you started. You should always check the deadline for each application to make sure that you apply at least a month or two before the due date. This will ensure you get your application in time. Here are some things you should consider doing before you begin; Register for classes at your new university. All universities provide detailed course outlines, syllabi, and grades. Because courses are taken and graded by different teachers each semester, know that you may be in different courses the first semester than the next. Even if you do not see your course listed, contact your instructor to see what is being offered for the upcoming semester. Register for academic advising at your university. This can provide you with the start of a great relationship with your advisor and help you through the process of getting started with your new university. Get familiar with your dorm room. Make sure you know your roommates and get to know your suite mates. Are you friendly? Do you get along with anyone? Consider getting involved in student groups that interest you. These are very important relationships to have when you start school. Being a part of your school community helps you adjust quicker and feel more at home. When you've got your application in order and you're ready to submit it to your selected schools, here are a few things to remember: Use your personal keywords. Remember you may have already been pre-screened by a counselor or advisor. However, your application is still screened against the admissions office's criteria. Use your personal keywords to help the reader understand who you are as a person. Talk about a time

Q: Spring MVC 3.0 web.xml configuration Currently we are using Spring MVC 3.0 and we would like to use Java Config to configure our web.xml. However the Tomcat settings that we are using we have configured in Java. Is it possible to have the same Tomcat settings in Java Config and the Web.xml? Currently we are using the following Tomcat server settings in our Java class: private Tomcat tomcat = new Tomcat(); tomcat.setPort(7070); tomcat.setBaseDir("/usr/share/tomcat/myapp/"); tomcat.setAppBase("/usr/share/tomcat/myapp/"); tomcat.setJarByClass("org.apache.jasper.servlet.TldScanner"); tomcat.setJsp().setJspApplicationContextEnabled(true); tomcat.setLoaderPriority(0, ClassLoader.getSystemClassLoader()); tomcat.setUseParentDefaults(false); try { tomcat.addWebapp("/myapp", new File("/usr/share/tomcat/myapp/")); tomcat.start(); } catch (Exception ex) { tomcat.start(); } A: I was looking for a way to do the same configuration using Java Config. This is what I came up with: @Configuration public class WebConfig implements WebApplicationInitializer { @Override public void onStartUp(ServletContext servletContext) throws ServletException { AnnotationConfigWebApplicationContext context = new AnnotationConfigWebApplicationContext(); context.register(MyConfig.class); context.setServletContext(servletContext); ServletRegistration.Dynamic dispatcher = servletContext.addServlet("DispatcherServlet", new DispatcherServlet()); dispatcher.setLoadOnStartup(1); dispatcher.addMapping("/");
