In these conditions, 9-HMA was found in the culture liquid obtained by growing the fungus on dehydroepiandrosterone. The fungus was then grown in a culture medium containing 1 g/L of dehydroepiandrosterone and 25 g/L of glucose. HPLC-MS analysis showed a peak at retention time=2.0 min, corresponding to a molecular ion at m/z 277.2. Since 9-HMA has a molecular ion at m/z 283.2, these data confirmed that this molecule was produced by fungi. In order to further investigate 9-HMA biosynthesis, the ability of G. gracilis cells to accumulate this compound was studied in cultures induced 0cc13bf012

AT&T Knowledge Network (KDN) 1.0 City, State.Arthur Kuster Arthur Kuster (August 25, 1891 - August 27, 1965) was the founder and first superintendent of Arkansas Tech University, now known as the University of Arkansas at El Dorado, in El Dorado, Arkansas. He was born in Frederick, Missouri, August 25, 1891, a son of Joshua and Alice Kuster. He was raised in Clarksville, Arkansas and attended the University of Arkansas where he was a member of the Beta chapter of the fraternity Sigma Phi Epsilon. Kuster graduated from East Texas Teachers College (now Texas A&M University-Commerce) in 1915 and he was married in Taylor County, Arkansas. In 1917, Kuster and his wife opened the first school in the town of El Dorado. The school was named El Dorado Industrial Training School in November of that year. Classes, however, did not begin until a building was acquired in 1918. In October 1918, Kuster was hired as the first principal of the new school. In 1922, the Industrial Training School was reorganized into Arkansas State Teachers College, becoming Arkansas State Teachers College at El Dorado, which would eventually become Arkansas Tech University. Kuster served as superintendent of Arkansas Tech for 45 years. He died at his home in Clarksville, Arkansas, August 27, 1965.
