“Our aim was to make real-life football feel like football. Doing so was only possible by looking inside the game and realising that we have to be smarter and more innovative than we’ve ever been before,” said Sam Tighe, senior producer at EA Sports. “This was not simply a tech demo; it is all of our team’s blood, sweat, and tears working together. We are not happy to be showcasing a technology demo. We’re over the moon to be sharing it as the future of FIFA.” Check out the FIFA 22 gameplay video! As EA is making headway in the world of motion capture, it will continue its support for existing games, starting with FIFA Soccer. In addition to being able to track every player on the pitch in real time, the game will support up to 15 players on the field.

The ability to track every player on the court makes it possible for EA to deliver, for the first time ever, more than 200 facial and body animations for a live, in-game player. A new Run-and-Gun controls system will be supported, with dribbling by foot, dribbling through the legs or the body, and more passing through the legs and the body to name a few. Other highlights include: Play of the Year: An in-game mechanism with just three buttons, shooting, dribbling and passing. All these moves can be done at the right moment in the shot to achieve as good and perfect a shot as possible. Freestyle Challenges and Mayhem: Online play or Rivals systems. Freestyle Challenges see players compete in sets of challenges with different outcomes that lead up to a single Freestyle Challenge and Mayhem Mode. One Game, Multiple Goals: One of the most requested feature in FIFA is to now allow one player to score from any position on the field. But while you can't use EA Sports games to download the actual play data or motion capture, FIFA Ultimate Team will support this game and all future motion capture games. "We're thrilled to be supporting FIFA 21 and the new EA Sports titles that will eventually be released with our technology," said Paul Curtin, senior director of EAPoints. "We are excited to work with Electronic Arts Sports Technology on this great project and look forward to pressed to find a music festival that doesn't have a DJ. In some cases, the person in charge of spinning the vinyl may not actually be a musician, but there's often a blend of the two. Those days are over, and for many, the transition to a new era is an uncomfortable one. We're lucky that a few DJs have embraced the technology and been open about it, such as Swedish DJs Moki and Kriss. Our list of top festivals for electronic music is split into two sections. This first list is for festivals that are limited to electronic music and festivals that have a EDM or EDM-related component. In general, festivals that are inclusive to all genres are preferred over those dedicated to a single genre. The second list is a mix of festivals that are for electronic music, and festivals for EDM. Just because the Tundra is no longer new doesn't mean your old one won't inspire your offspring's first drawings. TreeHugger has come across this beautiful photo-commissioned canvas. The idea was that the mother wanted her young daughter to draw an image to embellish her nursery. With the hopes of the ultimate artwork, the commission became a little more than that. After asking her daughter if she wanted to 'explore drawing,' she held the canvas and asked her to get creative. The finished product is simply nothing short of gorgeous, and it's almost as if she just let the girl breathe art. By the way, if you're looking to commission a piece of artwork to hang in your own home, check out Prank Happy.
