Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for processing image data of a television camera for detecting and focusing a target object and a television camera apparatus for carrying out the method. 2. Description of the Related Art In a conventional television camera, a near-infrared ray sensor is used to effect the focusing of a target object on a TV camera. The near-infrared ray sensor utilizes a fact that a light beam having a wavelength on the longer side of a visible light region transmits a human skin or the like and reflects off a foreign material, for example, and consists of two split photodetecting elements and a half mirror or the like. In the near-infrared ray sensor, the two photodetecting elements detect near-infrared rays transmitted through the half mirror, a foreign material or the like, and output near-infrared ray level signals. The half mirror reflects the light in a state of absorption of both photodetecting elements. Therefore, the photodetecting elements output level signals having such a level that a ratio of a near-infrared ray level signal to a reflected light level signal detected becomes substantially "0". Accordingly, when the near-infrared ray level signals from the respective photodetecting elements are compared, a standard value is set at a level where a reflected light level signal and a near-infrared ray level signal in a state of no absorption by the half mirror become substantially "0". Therefore, the near-infrared ray sensor determines whether or not a level of the near-infrared ray level signals is higher than or equal to the standard value, thereby determining whether or not the

Is it possible to implement a swap function in CObject if I don't change any data members or its behaviour? Can I get a pointer to the current object and swap it with some other object? A: I think you're looking for the Visitor pattern

I've tried to install the latest version of Glary Utilities but didn't find an online version. can you help me? . For example, the Buchmanns tell us that their daughter suffers from a "slow mind." In the context of what we know about the Buchmanns' religion, their statement that their daughter is "slow" is a religious statement. The Boccheris' statement that their daughter suffers from a "chronic illness" is likewise a religious statement. And their reference to their daughter as "kind" and "sweet" is not a statement of conduct, but one of character. The Boccheris and Buchmanns have invoked their religion's condemnation of LGBTQ status to define their daughter's character, and in doing so they have engaged in an act of religious persuasion. But we have already determined that the statements at issue fall within the religious-speech exemption. Thus, the Buchmanns and
