Breast Gland Augmentation Breast reconstruction using tissue expanders or implants is the most common procedure performed by plastic and cosmetic surgeons. There are 2 types of implants: silicone implants and saline implants. Types of Implants Silicone implants Silicone implants are soft, flexible, and can be used for breast augmentation, reconstruction, or for many cosmetic purposes. Their shape can be round, rectangular, or teardrop shaped and they are available in a variety of sizes from thin (for smaller breasts) to large (for more volume). Many women have silicone implants for the reasons mentioned below: It is possible to have a breast implant removed and replaced without having another operation to have the breast removed. Breast implants are available to reconstruct the breast after a mastectomy. The aesthetic result of silicone implants is generally acceptable. Silicone implants are more durable than saline
