Steel Faith Overhaul: Grimhammer II has been kicking around since the first Total War . Radious Total War Mod Total war: Radious has been kicking around since the first Total War .The district attorney's office says a man serving a life sentence for a 2003 double homicide that featured a grotesque bookkeeping error should get a new hearing on his punishment. Wednesday, Kern County Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner issued an order stating the DA's case against respondent Daniel Baker should be dismissed. "The court finds the defendant is entitled to dismissal of this action based on the new information that was presented to the court," Klausner wrote. The hearing had been scheduled Wednesday to determine whether Baker had violated probation terms of an earlier sentence. The district attorney's office alleges in court papers that Baker got a $4.6 million loan from a Costa Mesa bank that he never repaid. A bookkeeper at the bank made a mistake when processing a financial statement for Baker, the papers say. The error led the bank to send Baker two checks totalling $35,000, the district attorney's office says. A man who is not Baker negotiated those checks in her name. Klausner wrote in his order that the evidence did not support the allegations, especially since Baker appeared to have performed well during his probation period.The Alaska Chamber of Commerce and Industry Wednesday endorsed the group's local candidates for governor and lieutenant governor. "It's more or less a no-brainer for us," Chamber President John Hamilton said of supporting the chamber's slate of candidates. "We're strongly supporting Karen [Giessel] and her administration and we're looking forward to working with her administration." The chamber officially endorsed Giessel in January. Its endorsement was widely known and the focus of the debate among political observers. In the lieutenant governor race, the chamber backs George Leax, the Fairbanks businessman who is former Commissioner of Public Safety Julie Reinig's running mate. The Anchorage School Board, which is making its endorsement this week, endorsed Giessel. Her running mate is Kit Sulliota, who is an Anchorage elementary school principal. Hamilton said the chamber prefers Giessel to Reg Chapman, the Anchorage businessman who is an unnamed lieutenant governor candidate in the Fairbanks Daily News

The situation is this: I have to remove words from a string (string = @"I want to see him,";), but only keep the vowels from every word (string = "I want to see him";). I thought I could do it with array values but I can't, and I also don't know how to do it with regular expressions. A: // Run on an NSString NSMutableArray *vowels = [@"I want to see him" mutableCopy]; for(NSString *str in vowels) { if ([str isEqualToString:@"a"] || [str isEqualToString:@"e"] || [str isEqualToString:@"i"] || [str isEqualToString:@"o"] || [str isEqualToString:@"u"]) { str = [str stringByTrimmingCharactersInSet:[NSCharacterSet whitespaceCharacterSet]]; } } NSLog(@"%@", vowels); See the Objective-C Runtime Reference for TrimCharactersInSet. // Run on NSString NSMutableArray *vowels = [@"I want to see him" mutableCopy]; [vowels removeAllObjects]; for(NSString *str in vowels) { if ([str isEqualToString:@"a"] || [str isEqualToString:@"e"] || [str isEqualToString:@"i"] || [str isEqualToString:@"o"] || [str isEqualToString d0c515b9f4
