1. Muntinlupa - Muntinlupa is a highly urbanized city and a highly industrialized region within Metro Manila, the capital of the Philippines. It is part of the first class highly urbanized city of Manila, prior to the name change, it was called Putatan, which was a municipality separate from Manila until the 19th century. Muntinlupa is in the central and easternmost portion of the City of Manila. It is bounded to the north by Manila, to the northeast by Caloocan, to the east by Malabon, to the south by Quezon City, to the west by the Pasig River, in 1990, it had a population of around 350,000 people and contained the highly urbanized village of Ayala Alabang. Muntinlupa contains the districts of Makati, Taguig, Rizal, Parañaque, Pasig, Muntinlupa, Malabon, and Manila. It covers a land area of 14,926 hectares and according to the 2013 National Statistics Office, it had the third highest population in the Philippines, however, the population of Muntinlupa in 2013 was 278,510 and is projected to reach 512,662 by 2050. It has the widest area of any component of the metropolitan area, it is known locally as Muntinlupa City. Muntinlupa's official name was changed from Putatan to Muntinlupa in 1946 after Parang, Parang was a former municipality and a barrio within the municipality of Makati. The name of Putatan was derived from a Visayan language word putt which means an island, island, roughly translated, the name of Muntinlupa means island in Visayan, the language spoken by the natives. The name was given because at the time the Spanish came, the village was a slightly larger than an island, as river systems in the area flow towards Manila and Pasig river. Muntinlupa is divided into six basic districts which are divided into a number of barangays. These districts are, Ayala Village, Caloocan District, Makati District, Rizal District, Taguig District, Muntinlupa, Barangays in the village of Muntinlupa are Barangay Bogo, Barangay Buli, Barangay Gumayas
