Laser Profiles Ski-Dip Ski-Dip The "Ski-Dip" line will "skin" the bottom of your ski using a molten salt's unique physical characteristics. The heat, plus the presence of a mineral oxide, adds incredible value by acting as a lubricant. At lower temperatures the oxide remains inert, but at higher temperatures the oxide's lubricating qualities combine with the heat to allow the bottom of the ski to melt and slide into the ski-dip pit. Utilizing an Ultra-Precision Milling Machine, the alloy's alloy composition is tuned for maximum performance in a molten salt environment. In fact, Durasteel Milling has pioneered this process since 1976 by refining pure aluminum alloy and charging it into a mold where it is infused with molten salt. Then, the resulting product is subjected to a process that is both elegant in form and function.

If you could meet your country's "next Prime Minister," who would it be? It's a perennial question for these days of political hand-wringing over a prime ministerial succession. At Tuesday's debate, all 10 candidates agreed that an elitist Liberal government has produced an economy in decline and public services in decline. Who will be the man or woman to change that? Given that no one can name Canada's "Prime Minister-in-waiting" (the official title for a political succession) none of the 10 candidates will become it. The exception, though, is maybe the frontrunner. In other words, based on everything we know so far, Dr. Janice Sopachuk could be the next prime minister of Canada. Such confidence, to be sure, is based on strong evidence — and plenty of anecdotal evidence, too. From the moment that he announced his intention to run, Dr. Sopachuk — the former leader of the Saskatchewan Liberal Party and the current Dean of the University of Regina School of Medicine — was a front-runner. There are others who have run for prime minister and been winners. One was Joe Clark in 1979. But Clark went on to give up the race and the job went to the Liberal candidate, Pierre Trudeau. The reason for that? Any Liberal could be prime minister. But for a Liberal to beat out a Conservative — for a political competition to go through a process to avoid a contested election
