Gokoro's story is in the form of a Kinetic Visual Novel. A traditional VN typically has a plot and end game, but GKO's plot is always changing and evolving to reflect your choices and the choices of the NPCs. By making choices in GKO, you experience a series of events, which are felt by Kokoro, and you are never truly sure where your story is going to go from one choice to another. The game is made up of: ~ A story and main scenario~ A series of side-stories~ Characters that talk to you, and you can only respond to them or choose not to~ An optional, but popular, AYOKU (multiplayer mode). Art Style: The art style in this game is beautiful and I love it. The illustrations are clear and the backgrounds used are very well thought out. Battlerome Elements: The choices you make are what influences the story and give you the chance to experience certain scenes. These choices also have an effect on your score in-game. The higher your score, the better the chances of Kokoro finding love and being able to find a job. Sexuality: Gokoro is a Bi+ story and I won't spoil the story for those who don't wish to be spoiled. In Summary: It's a Bi+ tragic, drama, romance story told in the form of a Kinetic Visual Novel. Story: Romantic, Personal, Tragic Sexuality: Bi+ Character Types: Main character – Kokoro Other characters – Gokoro's Dad, Gokoro's Mom, Gokoro's best friend, the guy from the hospital, Sister Mori My Opinion: LOVE IT. I love this story, this game and this author. I hope that more people will be able to experience this story and the wonderful art style. Thank you! Hiranandani - Sachin, Natwar, Anand and Akash, Sanjeev and others are also interested in owning Latur solar projects. Hiranandani, Sachin, Natwar, Akash, Sanjeev are also expected to bid for large amounts of power from

By: Jamie Raab, Jara Samms Released: Mar. 06, 2016 Friday, March 11, 2016, was an epic day for the Raab family. That morning, Senior Counselor Wendy Raab met with a man she'd never met before. He looked a little like cartoon God. She asked him questions; he answered them. He affirmed her work, her faith, her dreams. He took her from the office to a car he'd reserved from his company's shuttle. That afternoon, Mom, Wendy, and Dad met Elijah and his family at their SUV, a black sedan. Elijah looked beyond God-like, a tall guy with a Bible in one hand, dark glasses in the other, and a huge smile. He asked his daughter, "Do you want to sit in the middle or the back?" "I'm fine back there," Wendy said without looking. Something about Elijah sent a warm adrenaline rush through all three of them. "Can we pray for you?" Wendy asked. Elijah glanced over at Wendy's dad. "If it's okay with your wife, yes. We'll stand up." Wendy's dad nodded. "I know this is... not entirely comfortable for you, but let me take you up on your offer of praying." They prayed together for a few minutes, then watched the rest of the movie and ate ice cream treats. "God's so good to us!" Wendy said after a while. "That's how God is," Dad affirmed. "God's good when things aren't so good for us. God's made his plans for us. He's made His plans in the fabric of creation and shown us what His plans are in history." "You said something important this morning," Wendy said. "Doing what God has asked us to do." "It's never about glory or glory seekers in the story of the Bible," Elijah assured her. "There's no trophy for God, but there are trophies for the things He cares about. It's about taking action toward what He cares about—good deeds, serving people, standing
