eyes third in SEC East Hampton said he believed the inevitable SEC East final rankings would have his team in third place, which was the right position for their postseason tournament. “We want to go as far as we can,” Hampton said. “This could be a nice, cool road.” Hampton said he thought the Tigers would open up a bit more in the SEC Tournament.

“It’s a great time to come in and play and get some competition,”

Hampton said. “It’s a good chance for us to get some confidence.”

We need this issue.

Crossover sports are just too much of a trend that it's starting to cheapen the actual sport of basketball. Just look at the name of the game, but "East" the ugly pig of a name, and "West" the good looking animal.

Eastern Kentucky's Y'Shaun Holman was a traditional player, but this season he became one of the few players to take advantage of the NCAA's new 3-point shot. Holman, a 6-foot-5 guard for the Colonels, tallied 47 3-pointers in a league-leading 52 games. He scored 18 points or more in a game 31 times, including a 28-point effort against Wichita State in a loss to the Shockers on March 19. This season he broke the Colonels' school record, as he made 37 3s on his way to scoring a d0c515b9f4

The owner of this website is not responsible for the republishing of its pages on other Web sites. If it's not perfectly clear by now, I'm a big fan of this blog. It's got tremendous cultural value, and, thus, must be protected from possible desecration. At least, that's what Sheldon Richman, an on-air commentator for Fox News' Special Report, claimed earlier this week. Richman recently read the droll, satirical article "Titus the American Eagle" on the opinion blog LGBatTV, arguing that the text is copyrighted by LGBatTV and therefore doesn't belong on his site. His claim was later disputed by his own readers, many of whom dismissed it as a joke, and the website's owners, who stated that the article is "generally protected by the First Amendment." The site's creators even offered to send LGBatTV the chapter from the book entitled "Beware of This Droll Article," in case they felt better about it—and they did. From the online comments, it's clear that some people believe the story is based on fact, while others think it's simply a joke. But these confused viewers never let the truth come between them and their free speech. Richman's readers were as rabid as LGBatTV's skeptics. While one conservative blogger wrote that "he is both an idiot and a coward," another referred to Richman as a "phony" and a "fascist." (And a commenter seems to have grudgingly conceded that the article was in fact satirical.) The New York Daily News offered a different explanation: "Sheldon Richman is losing his goddamn mind." The Washington Post's conservative blogger Erik Wemple covered the story as well, and pretty much got the same reaction. "It's an important warning to conservatives," he wrote. "I don't care if you're pro-life or pro-gay marriage. Let's all be careful. If you say, in print, the things that LGBatTV says, your online commentators will believe you were serious, and they'll have no trouble taking your words at face value." Fair enough, though Wemple himself later backed off from his claim that Richman had been completely insincere. "Now, I'm not saying that Richman only ever makes stuff up. But it's my belief that he lacks consistency when it comes to his views. If, in fact, he was making
