(Perciformes, Soleidae), embryos and larvae. The acute effects of aflatoxins (AFB1) on Senegalese sole, Solea senegalensis (L.), larvae and embryos, were studied by analyzing the mortality, hatching percentages, the time of hatching and malformations. Eggs from fish fed different concentrations of AFB1 (0.001-0.02 mg AFB1/kg diet) were incubated and were compared with control eggs in a growth chamber. Hatchability of control eggs on the 8th, 9th and 10th days of incubation was 89.3, 98.0 and 71.7%, respectively, whereas incubation of AFB1-incubated eggs was reduced to 81.3, 82.0 and 74.3%. Mortality was higher in larvae treated with 0.01 mg AFB1/kg diet compared to controls (52.1 and 22.4%, respectively) and in embryos treated with 0.02 mg AFB1/kg diet (33.3 and 6.7%, respectively). The time of hatching was reduced in AFBa-treated larvae and embryos. However, larvae hatched at the same time as the controls. No malformations were found in larvae treated with AFB1. Hatchability was reduced to 55.6, 45.5 and 32.4% after 40, 80 and 120 h, respectively, of exposure
