True Story: The Aussie Boy True Story: The Aussie Boy is a 1991 Australian drama film directed by Greg McLean. It was inspired by the true story of an Australian boy who became a molester and murderer of young girls while living in the United States. It was first screened in the US at the 1991 New York Film Festival in 1991. Paul Tony is a child of the suburbs. His life is largely uneventful until he turns ten and starts showing signs of puberty. His parents' marriage is going through a difficult patch, which is only exacerbated when he comes out as a homosexual to his father. That night, a girl is raped and murdered, and Tony's father takes him and his mother out in the middle of the night and throws them into the sea. Tony is rescued by some fishermen. He spends the rest of his childhood in the juvenile detention centre on a remote island. Cast Rick Mukajama as Young Tony James Co as Young Tony Wendy Hughes as Young Tony's mother Ron Taylor as Young Tony's father Max Cullen as Old Tony Kerry Armstrong as Young Tony's sister Janet Davies as Young Tony's sister Production The film is based on the true story of a boy who was sent to a juvenile detention centre after being found guilty of killing a nine-year-old girl in a drug-related murder. Release True Story: The Aussie Boy had its Australian theatrical premiere in Sydney on 9 September 1991. It was first screened in the United States at the 1991 New York Film Festival in July 1991. Critical response The film received a mixed response. Stephen Hunter in The Hollywood Reporter wrote: "While Greg McLean's affecting and atmospheric debut film is one of the most original movies of the festival, it suffers from the inexperience of a young auteur, meandering in its narrative and ending in
