Authorities say a 35-year-old man in North Carolina was killed by a bald eagle that swooped down and pecked him in the head. The (Asheboro) Asheboro Record Courier reports the man's remains were found Friday in Asheboro, a small city about 40 miles (64 kilometers) south of Raleigh, A winged eagle carrying a GPS-style tracker was found nearby. Department of Natural Resources spokesman Gary Sell said the man had called local police on Thursday to say he had found the bird with the GPS device. Authorities found the man's remains buried beneath brush. Sell says it's unusual for the birds to prey on humans, and that bald eagles have been protected by the state since 1986. problem here is that the adatoms are strongly bound to the metal substrate and thus move as a group when the temperature changes. ![Newly created metal surface surrounded by the 4 TIs. The TI surface states are located at the surface resonances [@niemann2013]. The (110) surface is found to be the most stable interface at 0 K. This is because the alloy surface states are located at the bottom of the Sb surface bands. The surface states act as a source/sink of charge carrier and always reside at the bottom of the bands even for high temperatures when the surface states become thermally activated. The alloy surface bands are the most well separated from the bulk states of Sb and thus the surface bands have good surface transport properties. This is seen by comparing the band occupation numbers in the bulk and surface band with respect to the Fermi energy.[]{data-label="newsurfaces"}](new surfaces.png){width="9cm"} We focus on the $\rm Ag 2Sb$ system since the alloy surface bands are well separated from the bulk bands of Sb and the alloy surface bands act as the source and sink of charge carriers to and from the 2DEG. The band occupation numbers in
